NOTE FOR RECORD: Basic states: At this time there is nothing in the way of specific information on Soviet developments in bacilli-carrying rockets which I have for transmission to you. A competent European scientist in a letter to me expresses his opinion as follows: "Despite everything I do not exclude the possibility of transporting living germs, or spores, in the way indicated. It is all a question of the time factor in propagation of heat across a set of media, separated by the very impermeable layers and vacua. Finally, it is a question of dimensions." I am interested to know whether any effort is being made to reactivate, or to establish on new foundations, a service similar to the wartime OSS. There is a crying need for it. The seriousness of this cannot possibly be exaggerated.
